New Delhi: Delhi Metro has been refurbishing its Phase-I trains, which have completed over 20 years of their total 36-year lifespan. Last year, 12 trains were refurbished, while work is currently under way for 18 trains on Red Line with the installation of CCTV cameras, mobile charging points and LCD-based dynamic metro routes.

OLD, STILL GOLD: Last year, 12 trains were refurbished, while work is currently under way for 18 trains on Red Line with the installation of CCTV cameras, mobile charging points and LCD-based dynamic metro routes.

The refurbishment process includes upgrading the installation of a CCTV system, refurbishment of the floor with composite material, repainting of the saloon and cab interior, installation of mobile charging facilities, installation of an LCD-based Dynamic Route Map and refurbishment of electrical panels. "Works concerning electrical panels would help improve electrical reliability on the trains," said an official.

As part of this mid-life refurbishment, the trains are modified with new features to bring them on par with the rest of the fleet. The Phase-I trains were introduced into service in DMC's Phase-I and II expansions, added the official.

The construction of Delhi Metro Phase-I with a 15-km of routes, began in 1996. The first section opened in 2002, and the last section opened in 2006. This phase involved the construction of three new lines on broad gauge tracks. It included the 28-km-long Red Line from Shaheed Jhansi to Rithala with its station at the 11-km-long Yellow Line from Vishwavidyalaya to Central Secretariat with its station at the 23-km-long Blue Line from Dwarka Sector-9 to Indraprastha with its station at the 27-km-long Green Line from Anand Park to Okhla.

DMRC has currently taken up the construction of three priority corridors under Phase-IV: Jangpuri West-OK, Ashram (Magenta Line), Naitika Park-Manesar (Pink Line), and Aerodrome-Tughlaqabad (Silver Line). These three corridors, with a total length of 65.202 kilometres, have 45 stations. Of these 27 are elevated, and 18 are underground.

However, the construction work on Delhi Metro's Phase-II project, with a total length of 124.5 km, began in 2009. The first section of Phase-II opened in 2008, and the last section opened in 2011. Similarly, Delhi Metro's 362.495-km-long Phase-III project's construction started in 2011, with the first section (Violet Line) opened in 2014 and the last section (Grey Line) in October 2019.

After 'Goof-Up', DDA Works on Erecting Shelter Again

Many Homeless Forced To Spend Nights In The Open

TIMES NEWS NETWORK

New Delhi: Delhi Development Authority (DDA) is rebuilding a men's shelter that was "incompletely" demolished, with the reconstruction work expected to take approximately a week.

IN THE MIDDLE OF NOWHERE: The demolition has left many poor individuals, mostly daily wage labourers, displaced on the streets.

Activist Sandi Kumar Aledia, who is director of Centre for Holistic Development, involved in ensuring housing rights of economically weaker sections - had written to Chief Justice of India D.Y. Chandrachud, stating that the demolition violated Supreme Court orders. Following this, DDA took the work to build the shelter.

IN THE MIDDLE OF NOWHERE: The demolition has left many poor individuals, mostly daily wage labourers, displaced on the streets.

"These were potable cables. Even if they wanted to remove them, they could have just opened them, instead of razing them. All solar panels and sheds are now completely in ruins, causing loss to public money as well. And now, while the authorities are taking up the reconstruction work, they are doing a hasty and shoddy job," he alleged.

The caretaker of the shelter home, who wanted to remain anonymous, told TOI that despite showing court orders that stated that night shelters couldn't be razed, the inmates of the shelter were shocked when they saw bulldozers arriving at the shelter around 11 am.

Gzb records ₹400cr beer sales this summer

Anjali Singh

Ghaziabad: The hot weather coupled with a series of long weekends and the IPL season was beer consumption skyrocketed in the city.

Upkeep not a walk in the park, govt to revisit plan

TIMES NEWS NETWORK

New Delhi: After several residents' welfare associations (RWAs) and non-government organisations (NGOs) expressed concern that the funds provided to them to maintain the city's green lungs were not sufficient, Delhi govt may seek to look into the issue.

Officials said govt would soon assess the impact of its financial aid for the maintenance of parks through Delhi Parks and Gardens Society (DPGS) and how the system could be improved for a better result. Officials said if required, a decision to enhance the funding could also be taken, depending on the feedback from RWAs and NGOs.

While beer sales typically see a steady increase during the summer months, this year's growth was particularly notable. The city's parks were not well-maintained, and the government had to spend more on their upkeep.

Officials said some of the RWAs and societies had also complained of their funding pending for several months. "Several issues have come to our knowledge and we may soon find a solution to ensure that the city's parks do not suffer," said an official.

While the actual number of parks in the capital under Delhi Development Authority (DDA) is 1,877, the Delhi Municipal Corporation (DMC) has more than 16,000. 1,500-1,600 of them - spread across nearly 650 acres - are being maintained by DPGS. RWAs, NGOs and societies. These small groups are funded by govt, depending on the size of the parks.

MCD, too, provides financial help to some RWAs and NGOs for maintaining parks. The RWAs or the NGO maintaining a park can avail the financial aid from either MCD or Delhi Parks and Gardens Society, which comes under the environment department.

"Between April and June, 1.30 crore litres of beer was consumed in Ghaziabad. This is nearly a 85% rise from 1.15 crore litres sold in the same period last year. With the onset of monsoon, beer sales are likely to slump but the demand is likely to continue till Sep 7," the official said.

DDA officials proceeded with the demolition. Renukar, a 62-year-old native of UP who had been living in the shelter for the last three years, claimed that he pleaded with the officials to give them at least 15 minutes to gather their belongings, but his request was denied. He is now staying in a shelter on the roadside near the demolished shelter, hoping that it does not rain anytime soon. Another inmate, Vishesh, 28, is unable to go back to his home as he cannot locate his belongings in the open. The inmates are demanding rehabilitation until the shelter is reconstructed.

In the letter (to C.G.), we specified that the action violating the Supreme Court's ruling which mandates that no temporary shelters can be demolished without approaching or seeking permission of the apex court," Aledia said.
