Abstract

Big Data serves as the vital element for Machine Learning (ML) techniques and Artificial Intelligence (AI) systems, providing vast quantities of data which is necessary for training and refining algorithms for impellent sharpened decision-making, increasing efficiency and innovation in many businesses including government. Notwithstanding, the rising dependence on information has brought to the very front the basic issues of information protection and security. The fusion of AI and Big Data has catalyzed breakthroughs on various applications, including natural language processing, recommendation systems, computer vision and predictive analytics. In this paper, we discussed about the privacy and security threats as a main driving force within the ML/AI workflow. Our goal here is to create a bridge between the standardization and research frame to increase the efficiency and consistency of AI applications development which can guarantee user satisfaction while providing a great degree of trustworthiness.

1 Introduction

Big data is the collection of advance data that contains high variety, arriving in accelerating volumes and with greater velocity to configure smart solutions. In modern times it is being a great help in different sector of fields like medicine, agriculture, gambling and protecting environment. In present times, nearly 6,500 million global devices share data over the Internet. In nearing future, this figure will rapidly increase to 20,000 million.[1] Big Data interpret this "bundle of data" to change it into the data that is affecting our reality. The information which is being provided by large number of devices globally is the epicenter of this revolution. According to top ICT (Information and Communications Technology) organizations, the IoT (Internet of Things) will have instantaneous increment, with up to 100,000 million related devices. Fig 1 discusses the 5 V's that comprehensive framework for understanding the key characteristics of big data, encompassing aspects of scale, speed, diversity, reliability, and the ultimate value derived from the data. The abundance of data enables AI systems to recognize patterns, make predictions, and generate insights at an unprecedented scale and speed. These challenges are addressed by several researchers and practitioners who have developed innovative techniques such as distributed computing frameworks, data preprocessing algorithms, and privacy-preserving methods [2,3]. Digitization appears to drive gigantic benefits to different enterprises like banking, exchange, what's more, majorly faced by AI workflow by taking real world examples in consideration which were provided by many researches. Furthermore, according to the rapid growth of AI, developed guides in standards can provide insights as per the demands and requirements of the market. The final phase discussed about the hot topic of AI-driven profiling, it has great benefits and impact on the world so do its risk to use it. Different case that were done on profiling were detailed in this section. This research paper might give support to upcoming research activities in future to address line with needs of people.

Steganalysis of Reversible Digital Watermarking Algorithm based on LWT and SVD

Abstract— The processes of Digital Rights Management are used to limit access to proprietary and copyrighted material. Original creator of any digital data need protection against his rights. Digital Rights Management involves two main concepts, watermarking and cryptography. We are working with reversible watermarking to keep cover and hidden data safe after extracting hidden message. In this work, digital image data is used as a mask, and using MD5(Message Digest) algorithm, we have generated a digest of data. The specific digital data ID is created. In an embedding algorithm, this watermark is then integrated with digital data. Here, we worked on a reversible embedding algorithm that enabled us to use the cover even after the secret message had been removed. We have considered the different kinds of digital watermarking and the form of cover data in this report. Due to imperceptibility features, a watermarked data may be transmitted over the open network. It will therefore draw multiple attacks and must be robust. We have used LWT-QR-MD5 techniques that is a loss less approach. The degree of robustness is improved when a consistent procedure is used to build the digest of the watermark. The results are showing a remarkable improvement over LWT.

Keywords— Digital watermarking, LWT, MD5, Quantum steganography, PSNR.

I. INTRODUCTION

The information about ownership of the digital data is inserted as a watermark in an imperceptible manner to prevent copyright and unauthorized duplication of the data over the network. The watermark should be added in a manner that it cannot be perceived by just looking at the image. When data is sent using a network, a number of intentional and unintentional changes are made to this data. Thus the watermark can be destroyed in the due course of transmission and the retrieval of original image and watermark may get affected adversely. A watermark that can handle multiple attacks is known as "robust watermark". Robustness and imperceptibility are adversely correlated. The two primary categories of watermarking methods are transform domain and frequency domain.

A frequency domain method is simple and has very less computation overhead. It lacks in robustness at the same time. On the other hand, robustness is better in transform domain methods but generally use complicated calculations. Discrete Wavelet Transform(DWT), Lifting Wavelet Transform(LWT) and Singular Value Decomposition(SVD) are the few important instances of the frequency domain watermarking. "When a particular frequency coefficient of the tampering area is modified only after any change applied to image, then it is known as spatio-frequency localization" [1] and makes the discrete wavelet transform a good choice for watermarking techniques. Many approaches in the research have used the discrete wavelet transform. Sweldens [2], suggested a novel type of DWT technique, called "Lifting Wavelet Transform, which is also known as the second generation of wavelet. Both DWT and LWT were applied in numerous image watermarking" [2]. DWT was used in many watermarking algorithms as [3] in which the watermark is embedded using DWT with discrete-time chaos system. Another study was performed in [4], where the DWT is used combined with DCT for RGB images. The combination of DWT with DCT is used also in [5] for getting a robust watermarking algorithm. There are a number of researches done while combining the LWT with SVD, in order to exploit the benefits of both the worlds.

Filter banks or LWT can be used to perform the discrete wavelet transformation. A filter bank approach uses filters like low pass and high pass filter; later the "down-sampling" is performed. These filters are applied on original signal. The important information of the signal are stored in approximation band and the high frequency data which is almost half of the original size is stored in details band. They are known as filters' outputs. Reversing the sequence of operations and restoring back the original message, is the inverse operation. "After applying the low pass filter (L) and the high pass filter (H) to digital images, four bands are formed in each DWT decomposition, and the bands are indicated as LL, LH, HL, and HH" [5].

The Lifting Wavelet Transform has less computational process than the filter banks that are used in a normal DWT. Moreover, the Lifting technique uses integer-to-integer computing, which eliminates the need for floating point calculations. Three stages are essential to create the approximation and detail bands in LWT:

A. Divide- Firstly, the number of elements in the original message are counted and then these elements are categorised as even and odd. This way the message is split into two parts.

B. Predict- "The details band is formed in this phase by calculating the difference between the original odd sample and the anticipated odd sample, which is derived as the average of the two adjacent even samples".[6]

C. Update- generates the approximation band by changing the average values with the difference computed in the predict step.

In this paper, a thorough experimentation and evaluation is presented to compare the performance after embedding the one watermark with same intensity using different algorithms.

II. RELATED WORK

The authentication of images is a challenging job on internet due to heavy traffic and large number of images. A number of researchers have proposed different perspectives in their work. In [6], the identical quantum text message is stored using two qubit sequences in an enhanced ASCII-based quantum format. The secret quantum text of size  $2n \times 2n$  is scrambled using the Gray code transform method before being embedded in the cover image, which is initially separated into eight blocks of

Abstract

Sustainability being the current buzzword globally, its increasing importance and fame cannot be negated. The word has an essence and an intention to restore your future, especially in the world which now witnesses and reckons the devastating effects on the environment. Business and organizations have realised that to maintain sustainability is no luxury but a compulsive necessity to sustain and stay afloat in the times to come. Post the recent global pandemic, the importance of sustaining resources at the individual and organizational level cannot be enough emphasized. In the light of increasing trend of adoption of sustainable practices by organizations, the research article identifies the effect of such practices at workplace on the psychological well-being of the employees and to their affective commitment in the organisation.

International Conference on Sustainability

Theme: Revisit Revive Restore

Date: November 22-24, 2023

Hosted by
Indian Institute of Management Shillong

Introductory note on SUSCON

In the last fifteen years since inception IIM Shillong has kept alive and strengthened its intellectual and moral commitment to the overarching cause of integrating Sustainability into every aspect of its academic programmes and initiatives covering all aspects of human endeavour. SUSCON, the flagship event of the Institute, is not just a Conference or another academic activity, it is a movement that has created a platform for dialogues and deliberations at a local, national as well as global level. It aspires towards creating a value-based, humane and sustainable future for business, academia, Government, civil society groups, NGOs and thinkers and practitioners covering all disciplines of management and beyond to include all other domains of pursuit of knowledge and practice. It dreams of leaving behind for posterity ethically driven business organizations, a sane and happy society, and a sustainable planet earth to be created by visionary, conscientious and inspired leaders of thought and action from enlightened academic and research institutions.

Over the years, many eminent personalities have shared their valuable insights on various aspects of Sustainability. SUSCON has been blessed with the presence of Bharat-Ratna Dr. A. P. Abdul Kalam, former President of India, Padma Bhushan Dr. Sundarjal Bahuguna, Jadab Payeng, the Forest Man of India, Dasho Karma Ura, the President of Centre for Bhutan Studies and Gross National Happiness (GNH) Research Padma Bhushan Dr. Mrityunjay Athreya, the globally renowned Management Guru as our Chief Guests among many others.

③ OB and HR

Recent economic turmoil has brought into focus the need for people practices that not only promote natural environmental sustainability but rather restore inner harmony and thus revive the inner being. This can be achieved through integrating sustainable practices and values into the workplace culture to promote employees' physical and mental health and work-life balance. By adopting these strategies, organizations can promote sustainability-oriented well-being among their employees, improving job satisfaction, reducing absenteeism, and increasing engagement and productivity. Additionally, this can contribute to a sustainable future by reducing the organization's environmental impact and promoting responsible practices. Building sustainable careers in organizations is important in the light of the fast-evolving technologies and highly dynamic job market. This entails and involves creating a work environment that supports employees' long-term growth, development, and well-being. Sustainable careers prioritize a balance between personal and professional goals and values, promote a culture of learning and growth, and foster a sense of purpose and engagement in employees.

Sub-themes:

Restoring employees sustainability-oriented well-being
Building sustainable careers in organizations

④ Operations and Quantitative Techniques

Operationalizing any business always has the potential of putting resources at risk. The risk is primarily of two types

- Out of bound depletion of resources due to unsustainable practices and operations
- Predominance of the non-regenerative facets of business operations.

The first of these two types of risks leads to the imbalance of resources which otherwise is gifted in a balanced manner to us by nature. Mitigating such risks essentially requires effort in maintaining the frugal dimension of business operations at all levels.

The second of these two risks lead to shock situations of acute resource crisis and detrimental impact on the environment. Mitigating such risks essentially requires efforts in maximizing the quality parameters and zero-waste goals in each stage of the product life cycle.

Keeping the above concerns in view, and with a risk mitigation agenda, the Operations tracks of SUSCON X will deliberate on two vital sub-themes:

Sub-themes:

Sustainable Operations

Sustainable Life Cycle Assessment

⑤ Marketing

Marketing activities adopted by companies benefit customers and society. However, sometimes, companies adopt questionable marketing practices that serve their selfish motives rather than serving the interests of customers and of society at large. Again, there are some actions by companies which may appear to be beneficial in the short run. However, a closer inspection will reveal that in the long run, such actions are harmful for society. Marketing receives criticism because of such activities. Sustainability of the practices adopted by marketing and consequently, sustainability of the society becomes questionable. The malpractices adopted by marketing may lead to depleting sustainability. Given, this background, companies should revisit their marketing practices, and revive and restore those marketing practices which are sustainable.

Sub-themes:

Sustainable Marketing
Social Marketing

⑥ Information Systems and Analytics

The information systems and analytics area focus on how data-driven approaches, enabled by analytics, can facilitate sustainable development. And it also focuses on how information systems and analytics can be used to promote sustainable practices and protect the environment.

Sub-themes:

Data-Driven Sustainability: Leveraging Analytics for Sustainable Development

Sustainable Information Systems for Environmental Protection

⑦ Strategy and Liberal Studies

During the last three decades, in spite of two Rio Summits and the Paris Convention, the vital Sustainability parameters have declined worldwide. The corporate organizations across the world also have their major share of responsibility in revisiting their strategies, policies, and actions thereof to revive the natural environment and restore a semblance of normalcy and order. This calls for integration of Sustainability issues and concerns in the core Organizational Strategy so that it assumes top priority in corporate decision-making process, both short and long term. Further one needs to take a relook at our modes and methods of learning to cultivate aesthetic sensibility and creativity to develop sensitivity to our environment and live in communion with nature. This can only be possible by integrating inputs on Liberal Studies for cultivation of our Right Brain to complement the active Left Brain, that promotes intellectual development and quantitative ability, for our Holistic Development.
